

Sale of African American Female Slave to Free African American Man lesson plan

Linda Ruehle

Loyola Catholic School

Overview

Students will read a 1783 bill of sale, Samuel Stanton selling a slave, Binah, to Prince, a free man, and use the Observe-Think-Wonder graphic organizer to interpret this primary source.

Time: one 30-minute class period

Grade level: 5

Standards: Minnesota Social Studies 5.4.1.2.2, 5.4.4.16.3, 5.4.4.16.5

Objective

Students will be able to analyze a primary source document using an Observe-Think-Wonder graphic organizer, and draw conclusions about slavery from their analysis.

Materials: copies of the slave bill of sale for each student, Observe-Think-Wonder graphic organizer for each student (or student notebooks)

Procedure

1. Give each student a copy of the slave bill of sale and an Observe-Think-Wonder graphic organizer. Students will have 5-10 minutes (as needed) to read the document and complete the graphic organizer. They must have at least two entries for each of the sections of the graphic organizer.
2. After students have completed the graphic organizer, have them share and discuss their organizers with a partner for several minutes.
3. Discuss their observations as a class. Students should have noted that the bill of sale is from a New England colony. If no one has wondered why an African American man might buy an African American woman, add your own "I Wonder."
4. Have students write the answer to the question, "What do you think is the most important thing you learned about slavery from this document?"
