Anecdote of president Wither spoon.

The late president Wither spoon was a man of considerable humor, as well as of learning and piety, and possessed a happy talent of instructing in his own peculiar way. Assembling his pupils, on a certain day, he addressed them in his Scottish dialect, after the following manner:

"Young gentlemen! It is probable, that in the course of your lives, ye will often be called to speak in public, some from the pulpit and some at the bar. It therefore becomes my duty to give ye a few words, by way of advice, on that important subject. I shall comprise the whole of my discourse under two heads, and shall be very brief upon both. In the first place, take care that ye ne'er begin to speak, till ye ha' something to say; and, secondly, be sure to leave off, as soon as ye ha' done."
